eagars are deast out at the Central Hote bar.

The Armstrong Proprietor, cannot be excelled by any house we have ever hat the pleasure of being waited upon, and own to George, the porter, every one connected with the centern seems to have inhibited the genial hospitality of the proprietor, and it really seems to be epidemic in this locality.

The Oddham House, Mr. Oddham proprietor, is all that we have heretofore said in regard to a first-class house. Henry Reeser, of Louisville, has charge of the "spirtual" department, and knows how to wait upon "straugers," and gentlemen too, if necessary, which makes it his business to do. Adjoining is the livery stable of Mr. Ben. I'm Bryant, but recently built, a most come modious and well-managed concern. Give Mr. Bryant a call; he can do you in the predominating "ffrench horse-flesh" style or anything in the livery business. The livery stable of Hall & Co. is a concern that is not surpassed in the city. A stranger may depend upon good treatment of his stock, ('cause thoy have outshere, which is missing in the city institutions of this description sometimes, and they sin't much 'sceared' to use it upon the beast, if he happens to have a hunkering after such things.)
